Pelée! It looks innocent enough. The sland lies amiling and peaceful in the sunshine, with rich wooded valleys lying between the green shoulders of warm foothills which rise to the heavily timbered slopes of the great hill itself. From well out at eas for a few minutes only we had seen the full outline of the mountain clear cut against the sky, the cone truncated as sharply as the top of an egg which has been sliced with a knife.

In the awful moment on that sith of May, 1902, when the cap of the mountain diffed before the blast of flame swept down upon the city on the shore it is maid that by the mere concusion minets and funnels were lifted out of ships that any off shore. But to-day, and usually, it is only from out at sea that one sees the monster's outline intat.

One by one the green and happy ooking hills wheel by us until, too suddenly it seems, writce a correspondent of the London Times, the long curved line of the bay is before one where was once St. Pierre. "It is men, not walls, that make a city," the Greek maxim ran, and more, it is living men. For the walls of the part and fower studded, another and myself, and walked for a mile along the edge of the microneity day and sound as anywhere on the finglish coast. But it is black—soot black. In all the mile alone we found not a single shell. A few crabs live in holes in the black stuff, which is part and, surgarded as a single shell. ago the newspapers published almost daily reports of persons who were fined or sent to prison for having allowed havty expressions to escape about the Kaiser's most excellent majesty.

The severity of the law was relaxed three years ago, and the police instructed not to be too eager in bringing forward prosecutions for "Majestätsbeleidigung" and the result has been that in 1907 the number of convictions fell from an annual average of 600 to 120 and in 1908 the number fell still further to thirty-nine. In the first six months of 1909 the number was only ten.

It is worn by most of the men one sees the fashionable restaurants. All thactors appearing in society plays not tion by a link of braid about an inch and a half or two inches long. Thus the coat does not meet, and the link of braid, which acts as a kind of understudy to the button, hangs horizontally across the walstcoat.

The King has extended the principle of the buttonless morning coat to evening dress, but in the latter garment, sometimes worn by the King, the small connecting link between the flaps of the cost is finished on either side in a beautiful onyx button which is intended only for ornament.
